Education: J.D., Harvard Law School, 1977; A.B., Oxford University, 1973

Practice areas: Business Litigation (Co-Chair), Professional Liability Litigation, Domestic Relations and Probate Litigation, Intellectual Property Litigation, Real Estate Litigation

Tony Doniger concentrates his practice in complex business, probate, domestic relations and professional liability litigation. He has extensive experience in the Massachusetts trial and appellate courts. Tony regularly represents clients in commercial disputes, intellectual property matters involving claims of trademark and copyright infringement and unfair competition, employer/employee disputes, and complex domestic relations matters. He frequently serves as a mediator or arbitrator in all such matters.

Tony's clients include major national and international corporations, non-profit institutions and associations, and individuals engaged in manufacturing, banking, technology, real estate, the arts, investment, and professional services.

In addition to conducting his litigation practice, Tony has been a visiting lecturer in Law at Babson College Graduate School of Business Administration and a visiting instructor at the Harvard Law School Trial Advocacy Program. He is also a frequent lecturer for Massachusetts Continuing Legal Education, Inc. and local bar associations on matters of trial practice and evidence.
